IdontWantDowry.com- a marriage portal that is also a social crusader

by A M I T on S R E A P N T J E A M N B E R 5 , 2 0 0 6

IdontWantDowry is a matrimonial portal that has been launched by a Hyderabad based web services company called NKG. As the name suggests, this is a meeting ground for those Indians, who regard dowry as a social evil and want to meet like-minded life partners. I was not aware of this site myself and discovered it after receiving a tip off from one of Webyantra™ readers.

idontwantdowry.com is like any other matrimonial portal but it is trying to carve out a niche by positioning itself as a social crusader. The site was launched in April and seems to be have app 3000 members currently, which is good for a start. The site™ basic look & feel as well as its navigation is quite well designed. Additionally, it will feature classified ads from non computer savvy users, who believe in the anti-dowry cause and want prospective

Webyantra is a blog written by Amit Ranjan, Cofounder & COO of SlideShare. SlideShare is the world's largest community for sharing presentations. Amit lives in Delhi, where he heads SlideShare's Delhi office. This blog chronicles his experiences on the startup journey. Amit has been an active tech blogger, podcaster & conference organiser. And he speaks frequently at tech/internet conferences on startups, entrepreneurship, technology, Web 2.0. (read detailed bio) brides/grooms to contact them through offline means. The intent behind the website is worth commendable; however I was a little surprised by the ability for users to search for partners on the basis of caste (there is a very long list of castes on the site). Wish they had refrained from this (seemingly) retrograde step; it would have made their case even stronger.

Something that really struck me about the site was its very smart positioning. For the online matrimonial space in India has a bunch of very effective and well managed websites (Shaadi, JeevanSathi, BharatMatrimony et al) and getting noticed amongst that bunch for a small, low budget website would not be easy. However by identifying a unique niche (specially one that has a social hook as well), Idontwantdowry.com has managed to do exactly that. It has received fairly good coverage in the media (press, television, internet). It's also worth noting that this is NOT a non-profit site; but their positioning has given a very humane touch to their commercial motives.

I think, there's a key learning here for all those people, who dream of creating a web product or service in a space that already has well established players e.g. job sites, travel portals etc. Instead of trying to be the *n*th player in a saturated market, it makes sense to identify a niche and be the first one to cater to it. And as IdontWantDowry has shown, if you think hard, you'll surely find many such niches' waiting to be discovered.

Hi Amit,

The kind of reviews you provide for the new indian web startups is really good. I just wann gave you a very small suggestion that the snapshots of the websites you are reviewing should be made as hyperlinks and point to the original site so that we do not have to look for the link specifically. This would increase user convenience.

Thanks
Amit

Amit,

Thanks for the suggesstion; I agree, that would certainly help users. I will make sure to do that from now on.

Glad to read the inovative idea of IdontWantDowry.com. By the way, I don't think anybody will sign up if caste based search is not provided. In our country people preach against caste system, but follow it for marriage and reservation.

Your blog design is very nice and neat. Kudos to the design team! I don't see any ads yet, will this continue to be an ad-free blog? 😊

I guess you're correct about the caste issue. Maybe I was reading too much into what is an unshakable reality in India.

A simple No Dowry check box on any of the sites (9shaadi.com/jeevansaathi.com/indianmatrimonials.com) with critical mass will blow them out of the water. I bet they will not last more than a year. Not a viable business model.

hai to all hey this is vijay kadiyala according to me dowry is the worst thing in the indian constitution because of it many married gals lives are being spoiled because of this system so i think one of the G.O must and should to avoide the dowry system and i also didnt like to take dowry rambabu October 4, 2007 at 8:52 am

good idea

Y.S.Sherif October 14, 2007 at 4:31 pm

Dowry system is only exists in india, bangladesh and Pakistan. It is no more exist in gulf countries and europe.

UDAYKUMAR KOLLIMATH March 22, 2008 at 1:46 pm

IT IS NICE TO KNOW THAT PLENTY OF PEOPLE ARE OPNELY TALKING AGAINST AN EVIL SYSTEM OF DOWRY. IT MAY SO HAPPEN IN FUTURE THAT THE NUMBER FEMALES AVAILABLE WILL BE SO LESS IT TURN OUT TO BE A DIFFERENT TYPE OF DOWRY WHERE MEN PAY FOR GIRL TO GET MARRIED. IS THAT TOO FAR AND NOT REALLY IT IS SO NEAR

dowry eqval to devil nowadays every persen ask dowry.

RaviJogula June 18, 2008 at 2:43 am

Dear Rahul,

I have seen your comments. Idontwantdowry.com is a cool idea and hundreds of this kind of ideas/websites are needed for India to cure the social evils.

I am really surprised to see your BET. I think your bet is 2years old. Still these people are surviving in the dotcoms.

Let us invite such good ideas instead of criticizing them

Cheers

Ravi
